No. 162 RC (A) CC

2011 marks the one hundredth and fourth time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Company drill was practiced at Ridley in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the College's Bursar, but it was not until 1907, when the Corps became affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that the uniforms and rifles appeared and preparations were made for the first Inspection in May of 1908. That Inspection was entirely a military affair. Some 40 officers and cadets of the school participated in drill, General Salute, firing exercises, and in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the School. Our strength now numbers 600 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the past one hundred years, with a strong emphasis now on training for better citizenship and positive leadership. Although there is less emphasis on things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the School, and the experience of a student-led corporate activity, undertaken by the whole School, for the whole School are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

CEREMONIAL PARADE PROGRAMME

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th Century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting General.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium as the Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The Corps will then march onto the field led by the NCMs. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted by the Commanding Officer and saluted before the ranks are inspected. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for the inspection. The Reviewing Officer then walks through the ranks to ensure that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared.

Spectators are requested to stand for the salute.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Lieutenant Colonel's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the Reviewing Officer and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. Spectators are again requested to stand.

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

HISTORY OF THE CADET BAND

Started in 1891 during the third year of the College, the cadet programme was formally established in 1907 by the bursar, Capt. George Thairs. In 1908, the Corps experienced its first Inspection, which included the General Salute, inspection of the ranks, company drill, firing exercises, section drill and a sham battle where Lower School was captured.

What the Corps needed most was a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step. It was Cadet Captain Ferdie Marani '12 who established the first Ridley Bugle Band. At first, they had only four bugles (two donated by the Old Boys) and four side drums. Their Commanding Officer at once discovered that blowing a bugle takes much practice, and that only some boys can properly pace a marching step on a drum. He received a great deal of help from Bugle-Sergeant Streeter, a member of the St. Catharines 19th Regiment. By the time the Corps staged its first public parade in the spring of 1912, a base drum was added, with little Ernie Crossland '12 beating it. He was so small that, while marching, he could hardly see over the top of the drum but he was a fine drummer. The new Bugle Band was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily.

The first Church Parade to St. Thomas' Church took place in 1920 and in 1921 Lower School took part in the Inspection for the first time. On July 20, 1924, Colonel Thairs ended his days with the Corps. His place was taken by Captain "Cap" C. W. Iggulden, who continued in his role until 1946. In 1949, his son, Lt. Colonel A. C. Iggulden took over the role of Commanding Officer. When he assumed command, the Cadet Band consisted of 36 members – 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles.

There are many interesting stories related to the Cadet Corps, one of which is rich in Ridley Cadet lore. Col. Andrew Iggulden was a very military man and believed that protocol should always be observed. In 1977, Rob Stein '77 was DSM and had practised long and hard at tossing the mace to try to impress some of the 23 girls then attending the College. Col. Iggulden told him that he was not to toss the new mace at all. A long standing tradition had been to toss the mace over the Marriott Gates as the band passed through it on Church Parade. To be sure that this did not happen, the Colonel positioned himself at the entrance to the gates. Just as the band approached the gates, the DSM whispered to the Band Captain to "give the Colonel an eyes right". The Colonel was a stickler for protocol. He snapped to salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the top.

The Ridley Cadet Band has grown consistently since that time. Repertoire has grown as well with the addition of many more instruments than the original single valve trumpets. This provides a diverse and exciting blend of traditional and popular marches that both players and audience enjoy.

The Cadet Band participates in other events through the year such as the St. Catharines Santa Claus Parade, and the Ridley Christmas Market. The Band has also received awards for participating in the Niagara Falls Blossom Festival Parade and the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Festival Parade. Since 1999 the Band has been invited to march in the prestigious Toronto Santa Claus Parade.

THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RIDLEY COLLEGE CADET CORPS BAND #162

The Ridley College Cadet Corps Band #162 has a long and distinguished history. It has grown since its inception from a bass drum and a few bugles to a modern marching band featuring a full range of instruments from piccolo to baritone sax as well as quad toms! This year marks the 100th anniversary of the band.

"In 1912, it was decided that the Corps needed a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step…The new Bugle Band [introduced in 1913] was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily." [R. Bradleyand P. Lewis: Ridley: A Canadian School, p. 79]

By 1949, when Lieutenant Colonel A.C. Iggulden took over, the band consisted of 36 cadets, 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles. Some interesting stories have come from Cadets in the past years. In 1977, when Rob Stein was the DSM or Drum Sergeant Major he practiced long and hard to successfully toss the mace over the Marriott Gates to impress the 23 girls enrolled in the school. Upon learning this, Colonel Iggulden told him that he was not allowed to toss the new mace at all and to ensure that it didn't happen, he positioned himself at the entrance of the gate. Just as the band approached the gate, the DSM directed the Band Captain to give the Colonel an official "eyes right". The Colonel was very strict on protocol, so when the bands acknowledged him with an eyes right he snapped to a salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the gate. Of course, the Colonel was not pleased, but he later laughed about it and today tossing the mace over the Ridley gate is a longstanding tradition. The ceremonial mace currently held by Cadet Drum Major, Keir MacKay'13, is ornately crafted from Scottish silver.

Together with the support of Maj. T. Sherman and Derek Fraser'79 and thanks to the generosity of Col. Fred Mannix'60 we were able to purchase a new set of Yamaha drums in 2000. The official Ridley College crests were hand painted on the drums in 2003 by Clive Prothero-Brooks '76 from Manitoba.

Throughout the years, the Cadet Band has been involved in several parades. Since November 21, 1999 the Cadet Band has played in front of thousands of people attending the Toronto Santa Claus parades. More recently the band has been invited to perform in the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Parade as well as the Niagara-On-The-Lake Santa Claus parade and even a Toronto Marlies Hockey playoff game!

Today, membership in the band is completely optional and we are grateful to a very dedicated group of forty seven musicians who remain committed to Wednesday evening rehearsals in all three terms under the leadership this year of Band Major Sidney Hutton'13 and Band Captain Eliza Coffin'13. The repertoire has expanded significantly to include everything from "The British Grenadiers" [the traditional March Past for "The Canadian Grenadier Guards"] to a new favourite, "Poker Face" by Lady Gaga!

#162 RIDLEY COLLEGE CADET CORPS

2014 marks the one hundredth and seventh time that #162 Ridley College Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Company drill was practiced at Ridley in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the College's Bursar, but it was not until 1907, when the Corps became affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that the uniforms and rifles appeared and preparations were made for the first Inspection in May of 1908. That Inspection was entirely a military affair. Some 40 officers and cadets of the school participated in drill, General Salute, firing exercises, and in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the School. Our strength now numbers 600 officers and cadets on parade, making #162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the past one hundred years, with a strong emphasis now on training for better citizenship and positive leadership. Although there is less emphasis on things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the School, and the experience of a student-led corporate activity, undertaken by the whole School, for the whole School are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

CEREMONIAL PARADE PROGRAMME

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th Century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting General.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium as the Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The Corps will then march onto the field led by the NCOs. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted by the Commanding Officer and saluted before the ranks are inspected. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for the inspection. The Reviewing Officer then walks through the ranks to ensure that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared.

Spectators are requested to stand for the salute.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Lieutenant Colonel's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the Reviewing Officer and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. Spectators are again requested to stand.

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

HISTORY OF THE CADET BAND

Started in 1891 during the third year of the College, the cadet programme was formally established in 1907 by the bursar, Capt. George Thairs. He formed the student body into four squads and taught them drill. During the next 16 years, the cadet programme slowly grew and, in 1908, the Corps experienced its first Inspection, which included the General Salute, inspection of the ranks, company drill, firing exercises, section drill and a sham battle where Lower School was captured.

What the Corps needed most was a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step. It was Cadet Captain Ferdie Marani '12 who established the first Ridley Bugle Band. At first, they had only four bugles (two donated by the Old Boys) and four side drums. Their Commanding Officer at once discovered that blowing a bugle takes much practice, and that only some boys can pace a marching step properly on a drum. He received a great deal of help from Bugle-Sergeant Streeter, a member of the St. Catharines 19th Regiment. By the time the Corps staged its first public parade in the spring of 1912, a base drum was added, with little Ernie Crossland '12 beating it. He was so small he could hardly see over the top of the drum while marching, but he was a fine drummer. The new Bugle Band was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily.

The first Church Parade to St. Thomas' Church took place in 1920 and in 1921 Lower School took part in the Inspection for the first time. On July 20, 1924, Colonel Thairs ended his days with the Corps. His place was taken by "Cap" Captain C. W. Iggulden, who continued in his role until 1946. In 1949, his son, Lt. Colonel A. C. Iggulden took over the role of Commanding Officer. When he assumed command, the Cadet Band consisted of 36 members – 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles.

There are many interesting stories related to the Cadet Corps, one of which is rich in Ridley Cadet lore. Col. Andrew Iggulden was a very military man and believed that protocol should always be observed. In 1977, Rob Stein '77 was DSM and had practiced long and hard at tossing the mace to try to impress some of the 23 girls then attending the College. Col. Iggulden told him that he was not to toss the new mace at all. A long standing tradition had been to toss the mace over the Ridley gate as the band passed through it on Church Parade. To be sure that this did not happen, the Colonel positioned himself at the entrance to the gate. Just as the band approached the gates, the DSM whispered to the Band Capt. to "give the Colonel an eyes right". The Colonel was a stickler for protocol. He snapped to salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the top.

The Ridley Cadet Band has grown consistently since that time and in the late 1990s, the Band numbers in excess of 70 members. Repertoire has grown as well with the addition of many more instruments than the original single valve trumpets. This provides a diverse and exciting blend of traditional and popular marches that both players and audience enjoy.

The Cadet Band participates in other events through the year such as the Pen Centre Santa Claus Parade, and the Fenwick Lions Parade. The Band has also received awards for participating in the Niagara Falls Blossom Festival Parade and the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Festival Parade. Since 1999 the Band has been invited to march in the prestigious Toronto Santa Claus Parade.

Although Company drill was practiced at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the college's Bursar, it was not until 1907, when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some 40 officers and cadets of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the School, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son, Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 580 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the ninety-odd years, with a strong emphasis now on training for better citizenship and positive leadership. Although there is less emphasis on things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the School, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity, undertaken by the whole School, for the whole School are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

CEREMONIAL PARADE PROGRAMME

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th Century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting General.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium as the Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The corps will then march onto the field led by the NCMs. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted by the Commanding Officer and saluted before the ranks are inspected. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for the inspection. The Reviewing Officer then walks through the ranks to ensure that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared.

Spectators are requested to stand for the salute.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Lieutenant Colonel's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the General and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. Spectators are again requested to stand.

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

HISTORY OF THE CADET BAND

Started in 1891 during the third year of the College, the cadet programme was formally established in 1907 by the bursar, Capt. George Thairs. He formed the student body into four squads and taught them drill. During the next 16 years, the cadet programme slowly grew and, in 1908, the Corps experienced its first Inspection, which included the General Salute, inspection of the ranks, company drill, firing exercises, section drill and a sham battle where Lower School was captured.

What the Corps needed most was a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step. It was Cadet Captain Ferdie Marani '12 who established the first Ridley Bugle Band. At first, they had only four bugles (two donated by the Old Boys) and four side drums. Their Commanding Officer at once discovered that blowing a bugle takes much practice, and that only some boys can pace a marching step properly on a drum. He received a great deal of help from Bugle-Sergeant Streeter, a member of the St. Catharines 19th Regiment. By the time the Corps staged its first public parade in the spring of 1912, a base drum was added, with little Ernie Crossland '12 beating it. He was so small he could hardly see over the top of the drum while marching, but he was a fine drummer. The new Bugle Band was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily.

The first Church Parade to St. Thomas' Church took place in 1920 and in 1921 Lower School took part in the Inspection for the first time. On July 20, 1924, Colonel Thairs ended his days with the Corps. His place was taken by "Cap" Captain C.W. Iggulden, who continued in his role until 1946. In 1949, his son, Lt. Colonel A. C. Iggulden took over the role of Commanding Officer. When he assumed command, the Cadet Band consisted of 36 members – 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles.

There are many interesting stories related to the Cadet Corps, one of which is rich in Ridley Cadet lore. Col. Andrew Iggulden was a very military man and believed that protocol should always be observed. In 1977, Rob Stein '77 was DSM and had practiced long and hard at tossing the mace to try to impress some of the 23 girls then attending the College. Col. Iggulden told him that he was not to toss the new mace at all. A long standing tradition had been to toss the mace over the Ridley gate as the band passed through it on Church Parade. To be sure that this did not happen, the Colonel positioned himself at the entrance to the gate. Just as the band approached the gates, the DSM whispered to the Band Capt. to "give the Colonel an eyes right". The Colonel was a stickler for protocol. He snapped to salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the top.

The Ridley Cadet Band has grown consistently since that time and in the late 1990s, the Band numbers in excess of 70 members. Repertoire has grown as well with the addition of many more instruments than the original single valve trumpets. This provides a diverse and exciting blend of traditional and popular marches that both players and audience enjoy.

The Cadet Band participates in other events through the year such as the Pen Centre Santa Claus Parade, and the Fenwick Lions Parade. The Band has also received awards for participating in the Niagara Falls Blossom Festival Parade and the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Festival Parade. Since 1999 the Band has been invited to march in the prestigious Toronto Santa Claus Parade.

No. 162 RC (A) CC

2002 marks the ninety-fifth time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Although Company drill was practised at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the Bursar, it was not until 1907, when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some 40 officers and cadets of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the School, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son, Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 580 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the ninety-odd years, with a strong emphasis now on training for better citizenship and positive leadership. Although there is less emphasis on things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the School, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity, undertaken by the whole School, for the whole School are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

CEREMONIAL PARADE PROGRAMME

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th Century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting General.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium. The Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The cadets will then be marched onto the field by the NCOs. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted and saluted before he inspects the ranks. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for his inspection. He then walks the ranks to satisfy himself that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared. SPECTATORS ARE REQUESTED TO STAND FOR THE SALUTE.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Lieutenant Colonel's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the General and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. SPECTATORS ARE AGAIN REQUESTED TO STAND.

Parents and friends are invited to inspect the various displays.
All events will be announced and described on the public-address system.

During intermission on the field: Drill Team Display and Band Performance

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field
for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

History of the Cadet Band

Started in 1891 during the third year of the College, the cadet programme was formally established in 1907 by the bursar, Capt. George Thairs. He formed the student body into four squads and taught them drill. During the next 16 years, the cadet programme slowly grew and, in 1908, the Corps experienced its first Inspection, which included the General Salute, inspection of the ranks, company drill, firing exercises, section drill and a sham battle where Lower School was captured.

What the Corps needed most was a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step. It was Cadet Captain Ferdie Marani '12 who established the first Ridley Bugle Band. At first, they had only four bugles (two donated by the Old Boys) and four side drums. Their Commanding Officer at once discovered that blowing a bugle takes much practice, and that only some boys can pace a marching step properly on a drum. He received a great deal of help from Bugle-Sergeant Streeter, a member of the St. Catharines 19th Regiment. By the time the Corps staged its first public parade in the spring of 1912, a base drum was added, with little Ernie Crossland '12 beating it. He was so small he could hardly see over the top of the drum while marching, but he was a fine drummer. The new Bugle Band was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily.

The first Church Parade to St. Thomas' Church took place in 1920 and in 1921 Lower School took part in the Inspection for the first time. On July 20, 1924, Colonel Thairs ended his days with the Corps. His place was taken by "Cap" Captain C. W. Iggulden, who continued in his role until 1946. In 1949, his son, Lt. Colonel A. C. Iggulden took over the role of Commanding Officer. When he assumed command, the Cadet Band consisted of 36 members – 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles.

There are many interesting stories related to the Cadet Corps, one of which is rich in Ridley Cadet lore. Col. Andrew Iggulden was a very military man and believed that protocol should always be observed. In 1977, Rob Stein '77 was DSM and had practiced long and hard at tossing the mace to try to impress some of the 23 girls then attending the College. Col. Iggulden told him that he was not to toss the new mace at all. A long standing tradition had been to toss the mace over the Ridley gate as the band passed through it on Church Parade. To be sure that this did not happen, the Colonel positioned himself at the entrance to the gate. Just as the band approached the gates, the DSM whispered to the Band Capt. to "give the Colonel an eyes right". The Colonel was a stickler for protocol. He snapped to salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the top.This year DSM Alex Wilson threw two wonderful tosses over the gate – one on the way out and one on the way back to campus.

The Ridley Cadet Band has grown consistently since that time and in the late 1990s, the Band numbers in excess of 80 members. Repertoire has grown as well with the addition of many more instruments than the original single valve trumpets. This provides a diverse and exciting blend of traditional and popular marches that both players and audience enjoy.

The Cadet Band participates in other events through the year such as the Pen Centre Santa Claus Parade, Arts Night and the Fenwick Lions Parade. The Band has also received awards for participating in the Niagara Falls Blossom Festival Parade and the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Festival Parade. In 1999, the Band was invited to march in the prestigious Toronto Santa Claus Parade.

No. 162 RC (A) CC

1999 marks the ninety-second time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Although Company drill was practised at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the Bursar, it was not until 1907, when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some 40 officers and cadets of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the school, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son, Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 580 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the ninety years, with a strong emphasis now on training for better citizenship. Although there is less emphasis on things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the school, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity, undertaken by the whole school, for the whole school are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

Ceremonial Parade Programme

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th Century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting General.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium. The Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The cadets will then be marched onto the field by the NCOs. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted and saluted before he inspects the ranks. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for his inspection. He then walks the ranks to satisfy himself that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared.
SPECTATORS ARE REQUESTED TO STAND FOR THE SALUTE.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Lieutenant Colonel's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the General and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. SPECTATORS ARE AGAIN REQUESTED TO STAND.

Parents and friends are invited to inspect the various displays. All events will be announced and described on the public-address system.

During intermission on the field: Drill Team Display and Band Performance

The Middle School is marching today under its own flag which was designed by Graham Lowe.

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field
for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

History of the Cadet Band

Started in 1891 during the third year of the College, the cadet programme was formally established in 1907 by the bursar, Capt. George Thairs. He formed the student body into four squads and taught them drill. During the next 16 years, the cadet programme slowly grew and, in 1908, the Corps experienced its first Inspection, which included the General Salute, inspection of the ranks, company drill, firing exercises, section drill and a sham battle where Lower School was captured.

What the Corps needed most was a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step. It was Cadet Captain Ferdie Marani '12 who established the first Ridley Bugle Band. At first, they had only four bugles (two donated by the Old Boys) and four side drums. Their Commanding Officer at once discovered that blowing a bugle takes much practice, and that only some boys can pace a marching step properly on a drum. He received a great deal of help from Bugle-Sergeant Streeter, a member of the St. Catharines 19th Regiment. By the time the Corps staged its first public parade in the spring of 1912, a base drum was added, with little Ernie Crossland '12 beating it. He was so small he could hardly see over the top of the drum while marching, but he was a fine drummer. The new Bugle Band was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily.

The first Church Parade to St. Thomas' Church took place in 1920 and in 1921 Lower School took part in the Inspection for the first time. On July 20, 1924, Colonel Thairs ended his days with the Corps. His place was taken by "Cap" Captain C. W. Iggulden, who continued in his role until 1949. Later, his son, Lt. Colonel A. C. Iggulden took over the role of Commanding Officer. When he assumed command, the Cadet Band consisted of 36 members – 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles.

There are many interesting stories related to the Cadet Corps, one of which is rich in Ridley Cadet lore. Col. Andrew Iggulden was a very military man and believed that protocol should always be observed. In 1977, Rob Stein '77 was DSM and had practiced long and hard at tossing the mace to try to impress some of the 23 girls then attending the College. Col. Iggulden told him that he was not to toss the new mace at all. A long standing tradition had been to toss the mace over the Ridley gate as the band passed through it on Church Parade. To be sure that this did not happen, the Colonel positioned himself at the entrance to the gate. Just as the band approached the gates, the DSM whispered to the Band Capt. to "give the Colonel an eyes right". The Colonel was a stickler for protocol. He snapped to salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the top.

The Ridley Cadet Band has grown consistently since that time and in the late 1990s, the Band numbers in excess of 80 members. Repertoire has grown as well with the addition of many more instruments than the original single valve trumpets. This provides a diverse and exciting blend of traditional and popular marches that both players and audience enjoy.

The Cadet Band participates in other events through the year such as the Pen Centre Santa Claus Parade, Arts Night and the Fenwick Lions Parade. The Band has also received awards for participating in the Niagara Falls Blossom Festival Parade and the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Festival Parade.

No. 162 RC (A) CC

1998 marks the ninety-first time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Although Company drill was practised at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the Bursar, it was not until 1907, when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some 40 officers and cadets of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the school, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son, Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 580 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the ninety years, with a strong emphasis now on training for better citizenship. Although there is less emphasis on things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the school, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity, undertaken by the whole school, for the whole school are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

No. 162 RC (A) CC

1995 marks the eighty-eighth time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Although Company drill was practised at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the Bursar, it was not until 1907, when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some forty cadets and officers of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the school, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 560 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the eighty-eight years, with a strong emphasis now upon training for better citizenship. Although there is less emphasis upon things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the school, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity undertaken by the whole school for the whole school are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

Ceremonial Parade Programme

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting general.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium. The Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The cadets will then be marched onto the field by the NCOs. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted and saluted before he inspects the ranks. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for his inspection. He then walks the ranks to satisfy himself that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared. SPECTATORS ARE REQUESTED TO STAND FOR THE SALUTE.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Reviewing Officer's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the Colonel and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. SPECTATORS ARE AGAIN REQUESTED TO STAND.

Parents and friends are invited to watch the display by the No. 162 RC(A)CC Cadet Band during the brief intermission.

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field
for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

No. 162 RC (A) CC

1990 marks the eighty-third time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Although Company drill was practised at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the Bursar, it was not until 1907, when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some forty cadets and officers of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the school, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 598 officers and cadets on parade, making No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the eighty-two years, with a strong emphasis now upon training for better citizenship. Although there is less emphasis upon things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the school, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity undertaken by the whole school for the whole school are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

CEREMONIAL PARADE PROGRAMME

These parades are the portrayal of a ritualistic day of battle, 18th century style. The original purpose was literally to 'pass muster', in the eyes of the inspecting general.

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium. The Regimental Sergeant Major lines up the markers. The cadets will then be marched onto the field by the NCOs. The Officers will then take over the parade and prepare the Battalion for inspection. Once everything is ready, the Reviewing Officer appears.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted and saluted before he inspects the ranks. The 'General Salute' is the presentation of arms for his inspection. He then walks the ranks to satisfy himself that each cadet is properly equipped and prepared. Spectators are requested to stand for the salute.

The Corps will then present three ritualized manoeuvres which tell the story of the day. The March Past in Column (in line of platoons) represents the manner in which an army actually takes up its position on a field of battle. The March Past in Column of Route represents the army marching from its base camp to the battlefield. The Advance in Review Order is a symbolic attack at the end of which arms are once again presented for the inspection of the Reviewing Officer. At the end, the Corps retires in 'good order' and awaits the Lieutenant Colonel's permission to end the parade. Throughout, loyalty and respect to the flags, to the general and to the civilian population are portrayed by various forms of salute.

The flags will then be marched off. Spectators are again requested to stand.

Parents and friends are invited to inspect the various displays. All events will be announced and described on the public-address system.

On the Field: Drill Team Display and Band Performance

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

No. 162 RC(A)CC

1984 marks the seventy-seventh time that No. 162 Cadet Corps has offered itself for an Annual Inspection. Although Company drill was practised at Ridley even in the early 1890's under Colonel Thairs, the Bursar, it was not until 1907 when the Corps affiliated with the King's Royal Rifles, that uniforms and rifles appeared and that preparations were made for the first Inspection in May, 1908. That Inspection was an entirely military affair. Some forty cadets and officers of the school participated: in drill, in a General Salute, in firing exercises, and even in a sham battle.

Over the years, the Corps has grown with the school, and for the most part under the direction of Capt. C.W. Iggulden and his son, Lt. Col. A.C. Iggulden. Our strength now numbers 508 officers and cadets on parade, making the No. 162 the largest Cadet Corps in Canada. Cadet activities have changed over the seventy-seven years, and now there is a strong emphasis upon training for better citizenship. Although there is less emphasis upon things military, the privilege of leadership, the desire to maintain the tradition of the school, and the experience of a cadet-led corporate activity undertaken by the whole school for the whole school are all features which are still alive and flourishing at Ridley College today.

PROGRAMME

The Battalion will be organized beside the Iggulden Gymnasium. After the R.S.M. lines up the markers, the cadets will be marched onto the parade ground by the N.C.O.'s. The Officers will then take over the parade and prepare the cadets for inspection.

The Reviewing Officer will then be greeted and saluted before he inspects the ranks. Spectators are requested to stand for the salute.

The Corps will march past in column and then in column of route. These manoeuvres will be followed by an Advance in Review Order. The Corps will then give a General Salute and retire in Review Order. All of this is a ritualistic presentation of a day of battle, 18th century style.

The flags will then be marched off. Spectators are requested to stand.

Parents and friends are invited to inspect the various displays. All events will be announced and described on the public address system.

1. On the field - First Aid & Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation

2. On the Iggulden gym floor - Photography, Woodworking
   (static displays) Rifle Team, Camp Craft

3. In the pool - Royal Life Saving & Scuba Diving

4. On the field - Ontario Bi-Centennial Drill Team
   - Drill Team
   - Band Performance

The Battalion will then form a Hollow Square on the field for the presentations by the Reviewing Officer.

HISTORY OF THE CADET BAND

Started in 1891 during the third year of the College, the cadet programme was formally established in 1907 by the bursar, Capt. George Thairs. He formed the student body into four squads and taught them drill. During the next 16 years, the cadet programme slowly grew and, in 1908, the Corps experienced its first Inspection, which included the General Salute, inspection of the ranks, company drill, firing exercises, section drill and a sham battle where Lower School was captured.

What the Corps needed most was a band, even a bugle or two, and at least one drum to lift their step. It was Cadet Captain Ferdie Marani '12 who established the first Ridley Bugle Band. At first, they had only four bugles (two donated by the Old Boys) and four side drums. Their Commanding Officer at once discovered that blowing a bugle takes much practice, and that only some boys can pace a marching step properly on a drum. He received a great deal of help from Bugle-Sergeant Streeter, a member of the St. Catharines 19th Regiment. By the time the Corps staged its first public parade in the spring of 1912, a base drum was added, with little Ernie Crossland '12 beating it. He was so small he could hardly see over the top of the drum while marching, but he was a fine drummer. The new Bugle Band was the addition the Corps needed. Its size and the number of instruments grew steadily.

The first Church Parade to St. Thomas' Church took place in 1920 and in 1921 Lower School took part in the Inspection for the first time. On July 20, 1924, Colonel Thairs ended his days with the Corps. His place was taken by "Cap" Captain C. W. Iggulden, who continued in his role until 1946. In 1949, his son, Lt. Colonel A. C. Iggulden took over the role of Commanding Officer. When he assumed command, the Cadet Band consisted of 36 members – 15 side drums, 2 tenor drums, 1 bass drum and 16 bugles.

There are many interesting stories related to the Cadet Corps, one of which is rich in Ridley Cadet lore. Col. Andrew Iggulden was a very military man and believed that protocol should always be observed. In 1977, Rob Stein '77 was DSM and had practiced long and hard at tossing the mace to try to impress some of the 23 girls then attending the College. Col. Iggulden told him that he was not to toss the new mace at all. A long standing tradition had been to toss the mace over the Ridley gate as the band passed through it on Church Parade. To be sure that this did not happen, the Colonel positioned himself at the entrance to the gate. Just as the band approached the gates, the DSM whispered to the Band Capt. to "give the Colonel an eyes right". The Colonel was a stickler for protocol. He snapped to salute just as the DSM tossed the mace perfectly over the top.

The Ridley Cadet Band has grown consistently since that time and in the late 1990s, the Band numbers in excess of 70 members. Repertoire has grown as well with the addition of many more instruments than the original single valve trumpets. This provides a diverse and exciting blend of traditional and popular marches that both players and audience enjoy.

The Cadet Band participates in other events through the year such as the Pen Centre Santa Claus Parade, and the Fenwick Lions Parade. The Band has also received awards for participating in the Niagara Falls Blossom Festival Parade and the St. Catharines Grape and Wine Festival Parade. Since 1999 the Band has been invited to march in the prestigious Toronto Santa Claus Parade.

ANNUAL INSPECTION

Wednesday,May 15th,1957

Ridley College
St.Catharines, Ontario

The Officers, non-Commissioned Officers, and Cadets of the Corps extend their Greetings to:

Major General S.F.Clark, O.B.E. C.D.

General Officer Commanding Central Command

Major A.E.Page, 2 i/c

44th Fd. Regt. R.C.A. (M)

Capt. H.G.L.Hutton, Cadet Training Officer

Central Ontario Area

The Old Boys, the Parents, and their Friends.

It is hoped that the following brief outline of the Inspection Procedure will help you to understand and enjoy the Inspection more fully.

R.S.M. G.W.Young will call the platoon markers, space them and align them. Then the Platoon Sergeants will march their platoons onto the markers.

The Adjutant, Cdt.Capt.J.K.Wood, will take over the parade. On a command from the 2 i/c,Cdt.Capt,S.A.Malcolmson, the Officers will take up their positions on the parade.

The Corps O.C.,Cdt.Major P.A.D.Smith, will move the Corps to the inspection line and the Colours will be marched on.
(Spectators please stand)

The Corps will be brought to the open order and the Officers will take posts in review order to await the arrival of the Inspecting Officer.

The Inspecting Officer will be saluted and the ranks will be inspected, Lower School Tribes first.

The Corps will march past in column of platoons and in column of route. The Corps will then advance in review order. The general salute will be given and the Corps will retire in review order.

The Colours will be marched off. (Spectators please stand)
